THE SILVER CREEK LUMBER CO.,
CREMONA, ALTA.

Local and General

B. H. Armstrong, of Calgary, is a visitor in town today.

F. R. Parker is moving his household effects to Carstairs today.

P. E. Rickard was threshing at his farm west of town yesterday.

The electric lights were installed in the Alberta Hotel the last of the past week.

Is your property insured against loss by fire? If not see J. S. Martin.

Mr. McLaren Sr. and wife left on Monday for the east where they will reside in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Morrow are expected to arrive home from the east about the end of the week.

Fine printing of all kinds done at the Chronicle Office neatly and promptly. Give us your order now.

Chas. Smart closed a deal for his threshing outfit which now belongs to a large farmer in the east country.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Mutch arrived in Crossfield on last Saturday and he is now employed at the Alberta Hotel.

A consignment of about 150 head of cattle were received this week by P. C. Cowling, which will be wintered in this district.

Money to Loan on Improved
Farms. No commission, no delay.
You get the money in a few days.
See Hultgren & Davis.

Dick Nichols returned last week from Halkirk Alta., where he has been employed for the last few weeks on the ranch of Onicks &
Armstrong at that place.

The local lodge of Odd Fellows held a smoker in their hall on Monday evening. A few friends of the members of the lodge were present and all report a pleasant evening.

Farmers get your buildings insured in the Wawanesa Mutual Fire Insurance Co. It is both economical and safe. $1.10 per hundred for three years. Hultgren & Davis, Agents.

Miss Pearl Eby, of Carstairs, is in town today in the interests of The Morning Albertan, Calgary. Miss Eby is a hard worker and no doubt will be one of the ones who will enjoy a trip to California.

A Case Threshing outfit was unloaded here last week consigned to Messrs. Wigle, Lynn Bros., and other farmers in that neighborhood.
A. W. Gordon is the local agent, through whom the sale was made.

All lovers of skating will be more than pleased to learn that the Messrs. Wm. Unquhart and Wm.
Laut have decided to build a skating rink in Crossfield this winter, and work will be commenced as soon as the weather will allow.

Is your wife and family provided for? Life insurance is a very necessary investment and every man should make this provision for the ones who are dependent upon him for support. If you are not protected see J. S. Martin. He is a agent for the best Company in Canada.

The Garrick Players have been booked by the Odd Fellows to show in their hall on Thursday, Dec. 21st.
Frank Lloyd, who is at the head of this company, is pronounced to be by the Saskatoon Phoenix, the "First Comedian" on the Canadian stage.

Mr. L. E. Davis, former owner of The Carstairs Journal, has disposed of his business to a gentleman from Calgary, who will take immediate possession and edit the local paper. Mr. Davis has been editing The Journal for the past five years and has created a paper which is meeting with great success.
Mr. and Mrs. Davis expect to leave for Calgary the latter part of the month, where they will live in the future.—The Albertan.

LADIES!—Are you aware that Christmas will soon be here, and with it comes the worry of buying Christmas gifts for friends far away.
We have a line of the prettiest
Christmas and New Year Cards ever shown in the West. Orders must be given early to insure prompt delivery. See them at the Chronicle Office.

In The Swim

A reviewer in the New York Nation illustrates his own comments on a certain new volume of essays by a story that is worth putting into circulation. Three lectures, he says, of the admired Dr. X., were talking in the vestibule after the sermon. "We must admit," remarked the first, "that the doctor dives deeper into his subject than any other preacher." "Yes," said the second, "and stays under longer." "And comes up drier," added the third.—Western Christian Advocate.

Tommy Still Said "No"

"So you took dinner at Willie Stout's house today?" said Tommy's mother to Tommy.

Tommy nodded.

"I trust," continued the maternal parent, "when it came to the extra helpings, you had manners enough to say 'No'?"

"Yes, ma," he murmured; "I said 'No' several times."

"You did?" she pressed.

"Yes, ma," whispered Tommy.

"Mrs. Stout kept asking me if I had enough?"

Girls learn to gossip by their mothers warning them against it.

Proof

"I thought I told you to present the bill to number twelve?"

"Yes, sir, I have."

"Impossible! I can still hear him singing."—Paris Frou-Frou.

RELIEF IS QUICK; BUT CURE IS SURE

NAPOLEON VAILLONCOURT SPEAKS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

They soon cured his kidney troubles, and in six months there is no sign of their coming back.

St. Anne des Monts, Gaspe Co., Que. (Special).—"It is six months since I was cured, and I have had no return of my trouble." In these words, Napoleon Vaillancourt, a well known resident of this place, gives evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills not only give quick relief to sufferers from kidney disease, but clean that disease out, root and branch, and cure it permanently.

That Mr. Vaillancourt had kidney disease everyone here knows. That he is cured is also established beyond a doubt. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. "My back bothered me, also my ears and my kidneys, and my limbs would cramp," Mr. Vaillancourt states giving his experience. Now all that is gone and he is a sound healthy man. Do you wonder that he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills?

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure quickly and permanently because they go right to the root of the trouble. They act directly on the kidneys. They never fail to cure.

SICKLY BABIES CRY HEALTHY BABIES SMILE

Baby's cry indicates distress—his smile health and contentment. The mother may be sure there never was a baby who cried for the fun of it. Baby's disposition is naturally a happy one and it is only distress such as may be brought on by a disordered condition of the stomach or bowels that can change this. So, mothers, to keep your baby happy you must keep him well—Baby's Own Tablets will do this. Concerning them Mrs. Chas. Polvin, Caucaupata, N.S., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have proved an excellent remedy for my baby. I had been using syrup, but they failed to help him, and he cried constantly. The Tablets cured him and now he is a fat, healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

At a dinner Father Healy, the witty Irish priest, sat next to a pretty young English girl. "They tell me, Father Healy," she said, "that you have no misletoe in your country."

"Is that so, my dear young lady?" the priest retorted. "Now I think of it, I believe it is true."

"Then what do the boys and girls do at Christmas time without it?" questioned the mischievous girl.

"Is it kissing, you mean, my dear?" asked Father Healy with twinkling eyes. "Sure, they do it under the nose."

Rayo Lamp

The Lamp That Saves The Eyes

Children naturally never think of possible strain on their eyesight when poring over a fascinating book.

It is up to you to see they do not ruin their young eyes these long evenings by reading under a poor light.

The Rayo Lamp is an insurance against eye troubles, alike for young and old.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp, but it is constructed on the soundest scientific principles, and there is not a better lamp made at any price.

It is easy on the eye because its light is so soft and white and widely diffused. And a Rayo Lamp never flickers.

Easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and revivify. Solid brass throughout, with handsome nickel finish; also in many other styles and finishes.

Policeman Wanted

The fact that Crossfield needs police protection was very recently brought to the notice of the public here last week, and while there has not been another series of disturbances such as was experienced last week for several months still the fact remains that they are liable to happen at any time, and a private citizen has no chance of protecting for his person or property should they arise.

The Village Council have done their best to get some man in town to take the position of village constable, but no one seems to want the job, and so we are still at the mercy of the transgressor. It has been suggested that the town send a petition signed by the business men of the town to the Government asking for the assistance of a mounted policeman, and that the town would furnish him with free quarters and would contribute a small sum towards his support each year. As things stand now we are 30 miles from the nearest police barracks, and should anything of a serious nature occur, it would in all probability be a half day before a policeman could be on the scene, and the offender would have a very good chance of making his escape.

Something must be done and why not try the above scheme and then if that fails some other step could be taken.

Note and Comment

We move that the weatherman be fired for bad conduct. Carried.

It seems that Calgary is always having an election. They are now busy down there trying to find men who will run for municipal honors.

It is bad enough when party politics are introduced into Provincial elections, but when they bring party into municipal affairs as they are talking of doing in Calgary it is time that the people get out and said something strong.

We are told almost daily that the strike of the coal miners is all settled and the mines are now ready to go to work, but coal is just as scarce as ever.

Now that we have been promised a skating rink this winter the local hockey enthusiasts should get busy and organize a team to be ready when the rink is opened. Other towns along the line are organizing and will be ready shortly for active work. Say we get in the swim.

Calgary papers are telling their readers that 50 per cent. of the crop is threshed. They have not been in this part of the world or they would know better. Perhaps they do anyway.

"Mr. Clarkson, I am happy to see you. Be seated. Will you tell me that you would call. Indeed, he showed me the letter which said you were coming."

The gentleman grew red in the face. "He showed you the letter, Mrs. Field?"

"Certainly. Do you suppose men can receive letters from their wives and not be permitted to read?"

"But-but Will is only just married, you know?"

"Certainly. The day before marriage and the day after marriage are very different. During the first he is single; during the second he is double."

"Oh, gracious! I did not know that marriage turned an honorable man into a dis honorable one."

"If we can't be honorable toward two persons we must decide in favor of the one to whom we have made definite pledges—that is the wife. However, I will do Will justice to say that he did not show me your letter. I learned of its contents in another way."

"How?"

"I was not prepared to make that clear just now. But enough of my having become aware of your feelings toward the woman who has robbed you of your friend. I did not know that your feelings and have a proposition to make. I will divide Will with you. Instead of you and he being Damon and Pythias, we will make the firm Damon, Pythias & Co., I, to be the company."

"Two men and a woman?"

"Why not? Will loves me, and you love Will. Will loves me, and I love Will. It only remains for me to love you and you to love me to make a delightful trio."

Clarkson drew a few short breaths and looked about him like one fearing to be caught in a trap.

"Oh, but Will!" he rejoined. "Would such an arrangement please him?"

"He will be delighted with it."

"How do you know that?"

"Because he went away?"

"Went away? Has he gone away?"

"For a month."

Clarkson looked more frightened than ever. The lady continued:

"We had a talk about this letter of yours in which you mourn your friend as if you were to lose him. I am sure the woman who has taken him away from you. It was decided between us that we should take you into the company."

"Take me in?"

The tone and expression on his face when he said this were so comical that the lady failed to repress a smile.

"Yes, take you in," she repeated.

An idea seemed to strike him, and he burst out: "There's an advantage in that," he said. "Another woman in the firm?"

"He checked himself.

"I will not say that another woman gets you away from me."

"I rather like that. But tell me about Will. Don't newly married men usually quarrel on honeymoon trips?"

"They do."

"Well?"

She thought a moment before replying. "Will's affairs are now in his wife's keeping, and some of them this one particularly are not to be divulged."

"But I thought I was admitted into the firm."

"So you are. But there are secrets in all things. I am to know Will's secrets and yours. You are not to know Will's nor Will yours."

"Well, I like that! Do you call it reason?"

"Certainly. What else would you call it?"

"Oh, I suppose it is—since you say so."

"Now I propose to make up for lost time. You and Will have loved each other since boyhood. Will and I have loved each other for several years. The chain between you and me is always wanting. It was agreed between Will and me before he left that it was to be a link in and form this bond between us."

Mr. Clarkson started and again looked wildly about him.

"I don't know," he said, "that I ever heard of an arrangement like this."

"There's always a first time for everything."

"There's one advantage in it," he mused, "that I have already mentioned. To be frank with you, I'd rather share of women—rationally—I mean. It's all right for Will to go in for that sort of thing, but I don't. This arrangement will be a barrier for me."

"I'll guarantee that no woman shall come near you. To facilitate matters we will let them all know that you belong to the firm of Damon, Pythias & Co. by making yourself at home here. For a starter Will left a pair of tickets to the theater for tomorrow evening. Have you any engagements?"

"N-o."

"Oh, if you don't care to go I can divert the tickets." She looked a trifle mischievous.

"I shall be delighted."

"Very well. Now we will talk of other matters. It has been quite warm lately, hasn't it?"

"Yes—no. I haven't noticed. How long did you say Will is to be absent?"

"A month."

"Won't you miss him very much?"

"Of course. I love him dearly, as he loves me. But here comes to the advantage of a trio. I shall have you."

Clarkson started as if a bomb had fallen on the floor before him and was spitting ready to explode. He had been looking at his companion he would have seen a very animated expression on her face.

"I was not aware, I didn't know," he stammered, "that a lady married to the man she loves could let him go away a few days after the wedding and be contented with the company of his best friend."

"You forget that this is a tripartite arrangement, wherein three persons are equal. I have no reason to hold myself about that. The secret of remaining comfortable in this world is not to worry. By this arrangement Will and I have endeavored to obviate the necessity of you and he loving each other. It behooves you to accept the situation and be contented."

"You have both certainly been very kind. I shall endeavor to prove myself worthy of your confidence and confidence."

"Conduct yourself! Of course you will. Now don't trouble yourself any more about trifles. Just fall into the groove naturally and all will be well."

He left her, wondering what it all meant. Surely there was some mistake.

Clarkson was so indignant that she supposed such a partnership as she proposed could endure without danger.

The head of the firm of Damon, Pythias & Co. had been looking at the clock long enough to produce a volcano in the breast of the Junior member.

The lady maintained the same position she had taken at the first meeting with Clarkson, talked about love existing between the three of them just as innocently and bore herself just as disconcertingly at the last as at the first of Damon's absence.

The only difference in her bearing from what he might expect of her was that she had a growing disposition to sensitize with regard to his treatment of her. In one respect the intimacy was a success. The other woman was permitted to get near enough to Clarkson to endanger his single state. As for the purity of the Junior member of the firm, she was no longer to be troubled with no question.

Nevertheless before his friend Damon returned Clarkson was in love. He had been looking at the clock long enough to produce a volcano in the breast of the Junior member of the firm. He had been looking at the clock long enough to produce a volcano in the breast of the Junior member of the firm.

Clarkson shuddered before the arrival of the man who had permitted this unique arrangement. Mr. Clarkson made two statements to the lady. The first was that he loved her. The second that he proposed to retire at once from the firm and never see her again. He then left her, and an eternal upheaval, but whether she was offended with him for making the statement or not, he could not tell.

The next day, while Clarkson was packing a trunk preparatory to a long journey, he received a telephone message from his friend Damon. He went to a meeting of the firm of Damon, Pythias & Co. at dinner. Clarkson tried to beg off, but failed, and, after numerous excuses which seemed to surprise and offend his wife he was, at last, convinced.

was enough."

"But do you think?"

"I don't think; I know. We'll celebrate your engagement at dinner. I've ordered the wine on ice."

Clarkson went into the library and in exactly forty minutes emerged with the blushing Cynthia, the smile on Clarkson's face having broadened to radiant joy.

"Only ten minutes late," cried Field merrily. "Bob, this is the real Mrs. Field. Come on, the dinner's waiting, and the wine is iced."

When the quartet were seated at the table and all had been served the stout host of champagne from a cooler beside him, and, cutting the cord that held the cork, fired a salute in honor of the newly engaged couple.

"Filling all the glasses, he raised his own to his lips and gave the following toast:

"To the Damon & Pythias company."

"And," he added, "to the Clarkson."

"Not much," retorted Field.

"There'll be no more capital introduced."

"That may be," said Field, with an idiotic grin, "but think of the dividends."

Beyond the Law.

When Farmer Fairweight came to London on a flying visit he discovered many things—that he could not do without horses, that you could walk for a whole hour without striking a field or an acquaintance, and, finally, that you could not sit a policeman simply because he compels you to move out of other people's way.

As he was being taken to the station he looked down at the policeman intended doing with him.

"You'll find out soon enough," said the policeman grimly. "Seven days, probably."

"Seven days? Ah, that's where I have, old bluebottle!" chuckled the farmer, triumphantly producing the return half of his tickets. "I've to go back on Monday!"—Answers.

Hardier to Carry Than a Cork.

The elevator to the department store was nearly full.

Raynor, who was one of the passengers, drew a smile and withered pite from his trousers pocket.

"What do you carry that for?" asked Shyne.

"Protection from what? Rheumatism?"

"Or, perhaps?"

By way of illustration he deftly impaled it upon the point of one that was within two inches of his left eye.—Chicago Tribune.

Not For Christening.

A clergyman had been displeased with the quality of milk served him. At length he determined to remonstrate with his milkman for supplying such unworthy stuff. He began mildly. "I've been wanting to see you with regard to the quality of the milk which you are serving me."

"Yes, sir," uneasily answered the milkman.

"I only wanted to say," continued the minister, "that I use the milk for drinking purposes exclusively, and not for christening."—Dundee Advertiser.

Head of the Firm—William, what did Mr. Sloppinger say when you handed him a statement of his account?"

"He said, 'Mr. Sloppinger, if I don't see you'll send the typewriter lady out of the room for about five minutes I'll tell you.'—Chicago Tribune.

A False Rumor.

"What can I say, what can I do? To prove this one eternal truth—this sentence is my love for you?"

"Words are but common things at best. More noise on the summer air. Put me to love's severest test. There are so deeds I will not dare."

"Out into the romance," she replied. "And drop your superfluous gear. You would give your life to me. Back home in that there garden."

The story that he has a head for business is false. There is nothing in it.

"Ah, dearie," said the lover's youth, "What can I say, what can I do? To prove this one eternal truth—this sentence is my love for you?"

HEFTY MITCHELL'S CRIME.

Man With Woeful Leg Has Bad Luck at Moving Picture Show.

"HEFTY had Hefty Mitchell, manager of the O-You-Kid moving picture show, on trial the other day," explained the landlord of the Pruntytown tavern, "and—oh! No, he wasn't tried for running a moving picture show. They don't arrest 'em here for that kind of a place. It's really ridiculous, which his ain't, exactly."

He was charged with assault, but I think, all things considered, that he was as much as such against as slugging, as the saying goes. You see, the theater was crowded that night, as Hefty had an especially good program. It was the life of Mass with Pua-ro in the Dead sea and the professor at the piano playing 'Come On In—The Water's Fine,' and all that, interspersed by the famous comedians, Rash and Begad, in a button busting style."

Anyhow, a row of people were standing in the aisle from close to the back to pretty near down front. And right at the most interesting point, where Maggie Maggart, back summerers on his copartner's chest, Hefty Mitchell tiptoed up behind the last man in the row in the aisle and whispered to him he wished he had of more forward a little 'V'us there was a couple more general admissions that wanted to get in. And the fellow he spoke to gave a sort of a start and jumped against the back of the man ahead of him so hard that the whole show of the show was broken."

The floor sloped considerably, the people piled up pretty bad, and there was a lot of kicking around. The fellow farthest in from the door was a wooden-legged man by the name of a fool what; he was bruised up a good deal and his wooden leg broken."

The beholderment arrested and swore that Hefty when he came up behind him pushed him with malicious aforethought, and his hands, which, together with a boll he had back there somewhere, made him jump ahead with as much force as he could. He had been shot out of a catapult, and the whole row of people tumbled down as aforesaid, though in my opinion nobody but a blame fool would bring a boll to such a place, even if a picture show is a democratic institution."

Well, he never, as he never, as much as put his hand on the fellow, and I was a witness and collaborated him, but I was setting right there, saying all and remembered noticing that Hefty had his hands in his pockets the whole time and thought to myself that it was kind of—aw-haw!—funny to see Hefty Mitchell, manager of the show, with his hands in his own pockets."

"I wasn't asked, and so didn't mention it, but the actual fact was that Hefty was, and his abdomen protruded so that when he attempted to whisper in the fellow's ear he pushed him without putting a hand on him."

"And as the wooden-legged man stuck his timber toe through a knot-hole in the floor when he took a step forward, he was, of course, crossgrained where it broke off anyhow, I couldn't see why Hefty ought to be fined unless the wooden-legged man and the boll fell were doing it. It looked to me like distributory negligence all right, so I kept still about the rest of it, and Hefty was acquitted."—Tom P. Morgan in Puck.

Changes in Writing.

Various types of writing have succeeded one another at different epochs. The character of the handwriting done in one century is readily distinguishable from that of the century preceding or following. The change is in the order of greater freedom and facility.

On the morning of April 18, 1906, the cellar of Paul Masson, a wine merchant of San Jose, Cal., contained a stock of 125,000 bottles, all neatly arranged. Then came the earthquake, and when the proprietor was able to enter his cellars, he found that 12,458 bottles, by actual count, were broken and the remainder thrown about in the utter confusion. It is curious, with such a large number of bottles, that the quake should have come within a few dozen of demolishing all either side of the stock.—Wide World Magazine.

Then She Digs the Spure in.

"I'm going to the museum to see the spure in the spure," said a sequester at a dinner in Washington. "No young man should be without at least one."

"Wherever a man falls his wife tells the public that he was too conscientious to succeed. What she tells him privately is a different matter."—Kansas.

CROSSFIELD, ALTA.

Two Farmer's Meetings

Two Farmers Institute Meetings will be held in Crossfield within the next few days under the auspices of the local Agricultural Society. These meetings will be held in the I. O. O. F. Hall, one on Friday, Nov. 20th and the other on Dec. 1st at the hour of 8 p. m. Able speakers are being sent out by the Department of Agriculture to address the farmers on the different topics that have to do with farming, and all farmers who can should make a point of being present at both of these meetings as they will be sure to hear something that will be of advantage.

Bank Of Alberta Will Be Next One

The Bank of Alberta will be the next chartered bank in Canada. Negotiations are under way by local financial and business men for the realization of a new bank to be known as the Bank of Alberta, with head quarters in Calgary. For that purpose a meeting will be held on Thursday evening.

A prominent Calgary bank authority is in the city at present conferring with Alberta capitalists. The bank is to have its head office in Calgary with branches in Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, and will be financed chiefly with Alberta capital.—The Albertan.

Fire Brigade Meeting

A meeting of the Crossfield Fire Department was held in the new hall on last Friday evening for the purpose of getting the Department into working order again.

D. G. Harvie was elected to the Chair, and then came the regular business of the meeting.

Wm. Eganhart was the choice of the meeting for Chief to take the place of Mr. Featherstone, who left some time ago for the east. R. Landsburgh, Sr. and Leslie McKay were then nominated for Captains on Engine No. 1, which vacancy was made by the election of Mr. Urquhart as Chief. The voting was a tie and Mr. McKay withdrew his name, and Mr. Landsburgh was declared elected.

Several resolutions were then put before the meeting for the village Council to act upon, which we trust will be done in the near future.

It was also decided that in future regular practice nights would be held and the second and 4th Thursday of each month was set to hold these meetings. The next meeting will be held on next Thursday evening, and all who are interested in the welfare of the town should be present.
